

Medicare.gov Website Overview

Get Dialysis Facility Information

Medicare.gov is a federal website that includes data about dialysis facilities and the care they provide. The website features rating systems for dialysis facilities based on how well they meet quality measures and how patients answer the Medicare In-Center Hemodialysis Survey, also known as the ICH CAHPS Survey.

The updated Medicare.gov dialysis facility website offers a better user experience and easier navigation while still providing the same data that can help dialysis patients and caregivers find the right facility.

Current patients can use Medicare.gov to see how their facility compares to other nearby dialysis facilities in terms of quality of care and other patients' ratings, as well as to find facilities for dialysis treatments when they are traveling.

New patients can use Medicare.gov to locate a dialysis facility near them that offers the hours and services they need, including home dialysis trainings and support.
